

Three businesses, one group.

A simple, honest plan for your three websites: Cobra Concrete, CDH Digger Hire and South London Bamboo Removal.

WHAT YOU HAVE NOW

Three good businesses, three old websites

You have three real businesses that already bring in work. The problem is not the businesses, it is the websites. All three are old, and none of them were set up to work together.

The Cobra Concrete site today. CDH and South London Bamboo are in the same dated state.

Old and dated

All three are years old and it shows, built on WordPress with heavy add-ons.

Slow on phones

They load slowly, and most people find you on a phone now, not a computer.

Google keeps raising the bar

Its latest updates reward local relevance and real proof. To keep climbing, the sites need to feed Google more, more local pages and data.

Not joined up

Three separate sites with nothing tying them together as one firm.

A small example: the Cobra Concrete footer still reads "Copyright 2021 make this Cobra Concrete Ltd please", a note that was never finished and has been sat on the live site since. Small thing, but customers notice.

BEFORE YOU DECIDE

Why not just put it all on one website?

It is the obvious idea, and it is the one to be careful with. Someone looking for bamboo removal is not looking for a concrete firm. Each business needs to look like the specialist it is, or the job goes to someone who does.

THE EASY OPTIONOne website for everything

Put all three on one site. Simpler to picture, and it sounds cheaper up front.

THE CATCHYou would lose work

Two of the three would slide down Google, so the phone rings less. You would be paying to lose work you already get.

Someone typing "bamboo removal south London" wants a bamboo firm, not a concrete company's list of services. The focused site wins the job. The all-in-one does not.

Better to keep three separate websites, and run them all from one place behind the scenes.

WHAT WE HAVE BUILT

Three new websites, plus one simple front page

Here are the three new sites, built with your real logos, photos and reviews, plus a simple front page that links them together. You can open every one of them right now and have a look.

GETTING FOUND ON GOOGLE

Built the way Google works now

Google has changed, and it keeps changing. The latest updates lean on local relevance and real proof, the site that clearly serves your areas and does one job well. These sites are built to give Google that, and to keep up as it keeps moving.

01

Real proof, not waffle

Photos of real jobs, reviews and your kit, the things Google trusts now, not thin sales copy.

02

Ready for Google's AI answers

Set out clearly, so the new AI answers at the top of Google can pull straight from your sites.

03

Built around your local areas

Pages for the towns you cover, so you show up when someone nearby searches, which is what Google leans on now.

04

Moved over safely

Old pages pointed to the new ones properly, so the spots you already have on Google do not drop.

ONE TEAM, THREE SITES

Three websites, run from one place

Customers see three specialists. You run one operation. Wherever an enquiry comes from, it lands in one place, so you can see across all three which site and which area is bringing the work in.

HOW WE WOULD DO IT

A clear, step-by-step plan

Nothing rushed, and nothing that risks the work you already get. Protect first, then build, then grow.

- 1 Check what you have
Get access to the sites and accounts, and see what each one already brings in, before we change a thing.
- 2 Agree the designs
Sign off the three sites and the front page you have already seen, and plan how every old page moves across.
- 3 Build and move over
Build the new sites, set it all up in one place, and move over carefully so nothing drops off Google.
- 4 Keep it growing
Ongoing work on your content, Google and reviews, with a simple monthly update so the calls keep coming.

Keep the three sites. Run them as one.

Do not lump three good businesses onto one website and lose two of them on Google. Keep them separate, run them from one place, and build them properly. It is money spent, but it protects the work you already get and is built to bring in more.

NEXT STEP

Agree a first phase and we get started: check what you have, protect it, and finalise the three sites.
